Former proposal: $11,203 \div 10,434 = 1.0737$

New proposal: By moving Capuchino (pop 456) to East side, slight reduction in ratio spread.
 $11,183$ (largest) \div $10,434$ (smallest) = 1.0717

More significantly, the district with 11,203 was reduced to 10,747, such that if developments are added to Mills Park or Crestmoor Canyon (10,434), it will not likely widen ratio spread.

I don't know if it is equitable,
but it's FOUR (4) Districts.

$11,202$ (largest*) \div $10,434$ (smallest) = 1.074

*(The Mills Park development will raise the ratio above 1.074.)

CAVEAT: San Bruno still must adopt a CITY CHARTER as soon as possible, partly because the restructure allows The People to balance  corporate influences (Amazon, Walmart, and Google/YouTube).

San Bruno's only asset is location, and they are buying it up! By means of business parks and shopping centers, they OWN the city. He who owns all the real estate becomes LAND-LORD! Everybody else is, by default, a WAR-LORD! (...and trust me ...we don't want to be warlords!)

Subject: SB Redistricting Proposal

Population discrepancy in District 1. But max deviation of proposal is still roughly 5% of 10,987.

Criteria is to be within ±1099 (10% or less).

Districts 2, 3, and 4 are on the money! 👍

Very interesting demographic transition:

1. AsianPaclslander
2. AsianPaclslander/White - possibly because of geographic spread covering Crestmoor, The Crossing, and Euclid.
3. White
4. Latino/a

I believe major developments will largely take place in Districts 2 and 3 along Transit Corridor Plan (TCP)  Lower pop gives them some wiggle room.
